

ABSTRACT

A computer system has a plurality of sub-systems each comprising a serial interface and a buffer device coupled with the serial interface for buffering crash data sent by the serial interface having an external serial output. The system further comprises a management controller coupled with the external serial output of the buffer device to retrieve data buffered during a crash.

20250606 10:55:00